This statement clarifies which personal information will be collected during the processing of the material, how your personal information is used and the rights you have.

You will appear recognizable in the recording, which is why the material could be qualified as personal information. The material is recorded, processed, saved, distributed and shown for the following objectives: to share among workshop participants, share excerpts to the wider public and to study the format of this workshop. If you agree with recording of the sessions but do not wish to be visible and/or heard, you have the right to close your camera and/or microphone at all times and ask your questions through the chat function. This applies to participants who do not have to provide a presentation.

Leiden University will take appropriate technical and organizational measures to protect your personal information towards loss or any other form of illegal processing. The material is recorded on MS Teams, an online platform administered by Leiden University. The material is distributed on Research Drive and will be accessible for participants of the workshop only. Excerpts might be made available to the wider public.

The scientific organizers Alexander Nolte, James D. Herbsleb, Daniela Huppenkothen and Anthony Arendt will be responsible for saving and distributing the recordings. The material will only be saved for as long as it serves its purpose: 1 year and will be destroyed afterwards.

You have right to contact us via info@lorentzcenter.nl to request insight into the recording you cooperated in and/or your declaration of consent. You have right to limit the declaration of consent and/or to withdrawal. We will handle your request following the ‘General Data Protection Regulation’ (GDPR).
